
MCWT Woman of the Year in Technology Award

The Michigan Council of Women in Technology Foundation is seeking nominations for its third annual MCWT Woman of the Year in Technology award. The nonprofit organization will recognize a woman in Michigan leading or driving change for women in information technology careers or fields of study.

Qualifications:

- A woman in Michigan who embodies MCWT's mission of inspiring and growing women in technology.
- A woman who leads or has led significant positive change for women working, teaching or studying IT and computer-related careers and fields of study.

An individual does not need to be a member of MCWT to win, but must be available to attend the nonprofit's 2018 Black and White Ball on Nov. 3 at the Royal Park Hotel in Rochester, Mich., to accept the award. MCWT also will announce the news in a press release.

To submit, please fill out the below application and email to awards@mcwt.org by Sept. 10, 2018. There is no fee to submit. Nominations may be made by the nominee or by someone else on their behalf.

For more information about MCWT Foundation's vision to make Michigan the No. 1 state for women in technology, visit mcwt.org.

Nomination form:

1. Name of nominee, position and contact information
2. Nominator's name and contact information
3. Explain how this leader is inspiring and growing women in technology in Michigan. (up to 250 words)
4. Describe how this leader has been an agent for change and has made an impact in advancing women in IT roles. (up to 250 words)
5. Optional: include any additional information, up to one page, that helps demonstrate why this nominee is deserving of the MCWT Woman in Technology award. Feel free to include:
 - a. Digital links to articles/publications by nominee
 - b. A link to nominee's LinkedIn profile (if there is one)
 - c. Additional references who might discuss nominee's contributions